TRANSCRIPT

The Office of Inspector General conducted a statistical sample of 100 Veterans' rating decisions to determine whether Veterans Benefits Administration decision makers cited adequate medical evidence to support establishing permanent and total status. OIG found that sixty-one percent of the rating decisions reviewed did not cite adequate evidence showing the disabilities were permanent.

Permanently and Totally disabled

SLIDE NOTES

Total disability: schedular or extra schedular evaluations of 100 percent, a combined evaluation of 100 percent, or a total evaluation based on individual unemployability.

Permanent disability: disabling manifestations reasonably certain to continue throughout the life of the individual (38 CFR 3.340(b)).

Permanently and Totally disabled

TRANSCRIPT

For an individual to be considered permanently and totally disabled, they must meet both elements of this benefit.

To meet the total disability element, they must have a schedular or extra schedular evaluation of 100 percent, a combined evaluation of 100 percent, or a total evaluation based on individual unemployability.

For a disability to be considered permanent, the disabling manifestations are reasonably certain to continue throughout the lifetime of the individual.

When an individual has met both elements, then entitlement to a permanent and total evaluation can be granted.

Let's move on to the next slide to discuss what is meant by reasonably certain and the evidentiary threshold for establishing permanence.

Slide 8 - Evidentiary Threshold for Establishing Permanence

Evidentiary Threshold for Establishing Permanence

- On July 21, 2022, M21-1 V.ii.3.D.4.d was updated with a note that includes the following:
 - “This threshold means that there is more than an approximate balance of evidence indicating that the level of impairment will continue indefinitely.”
- Permanence of a total disability can be conceded when the evidence of record clearly establishes that a disability is expected to continue at its current level of severity.
- Clear and specific evidence is NOT required to establish permanence.
- When evidence of record does not clearly and specifically show that the total disability will continue but also does not show a reexamination is warranted under 38 CFR 3.327\(b\)\(2\), concede permanence of the evaluation.

SLIDE NOTES

On July 21, 2022, M21-1 V.ii.3.D.4.d was updated with a Note that includes the following:

“This threshold means that there is more than an approximate balance of evidence indicating that the level of impairment will continue indefinitely.”

- Permanence of a total disability can be conceded when the evidence of record clearly establishes that a disability is expected to continue at its current level of severity.
- Clear and specific evidence is NOT required to establish permanence.
- When evidence of record does not clearly and specifically show that the total disability will continue but also does not show a reexamination is warranted under 38 CFR 3.327\(b\)\(2\), concede permanence of the evaluation.

TRANSCRIPT

On the previous slide, we discussed for a disability to be considered permanent the manifestations of the disability are reasonably certain to continue throughout the life of the individual.

Based on the findings from the OIG report, VA was tasked with developing a more concrete definition of what the phrase “reasonably certain” means. This prompted an update to the manual reference shown on the screen to include guidance on what is considered reasonably certain in P&T claim determinations.

As you can see on the screen, the threshold for reasonably certain means there is more than an approximate balance of evidence indicating that the level of impairment will continue indefinitely.

There is no specific evidence requirement to concede permanency. If the evidence of record, clearly establishes that the disability is expected to continue at its current level of severity, then permanency can be conceded. If the evidence of record does not clearly and specifically show the total evaluation will continue but also does not show a need for a review examination of that disability based on 38 CFR 3.327(b)(2), then permanency can also be conceded.

Now let's go look at how this OIG report impacts rating decisions establishing P&T.

OIG also recommended VA decision-makers support their permanent and total evaluation decisions in the 'Reasons for Decision' section of the rating decision by describing the evidence used to support their conclusions.

Based on this recommendation VA has updated the manual with the addition of the manual reference shown on the screen. This requires rating decisions establishing P&T evaluations to now provide the basis for the decision and a discussion of the evidence used to support that decision.

Adequate Rating Decision Narrative

For Training Purposes Only

REASONS FOR DECISION

Entitlement to Dependents' Educational Assistance under 38 U.S.C. Chapter 35

Basic eligibility for Dependents' Educational Assistance is granted as the evidence shows you currently have a totally disabling service-connected disability or disabilities, permanent in nature. (38 U.S.C. Chapter 35, 38 CFR 3.3807, 38 CFR 21.3021)

Evidence we have used to grant permanent and total disability status: Entitlement to this benefit has been established based on evidence from your VA exam dated October 1, 2021, showing a worsening of your major depressive disorder despite your compliance with ongoing treatment. The examiner reported total occupational and social impairment and noted the likelihood of improvement in the severity of your major depressive disorder is low. As such, basic eligibility for Dependents' Educational Assistance has been established.

TRANSCRIPT

Now that we know what is required for rating decision narratives where P&T is being established, look at the example of what is considered an adequate rating decision narrative when establishing a P&T evaluation.

The narrative clearly provides the evidence used in deciding the claim and the basis for the decision that was made.

Now let's look at an example of what would be considered inadequate.

Slide 12 - Inadequate Rating Decision Narrative

For Training Purposes Only

REASONS FOR DECISION

Entitlement to Dependents' Educational Assistance under 38 U.S.C. Chapter 35

Eligibility for Dependents' Educational Assistance is derived from a Veteran who was discharged under other than dishonorable conditions, and has permanent and total service-connected disability(ies), or permanent and total disability(ies) existed at the time of death, or the Veteran died as a result of service-connected disability(ies). Also, eligibility exists for a servicemember who died in service. Finally, eligibility can be derived from a service member who, as a member of the armed forces on active duty, has been listed for more than 90 days as missing in action; captured in line of duty by a hostile force; or forcibly detained or interned in line of duty by a foreign government or power. (38 USC Chapter 35, 38 CFR 3.807, 38 CFR 21.3021)

Basic eligibility for Dependents' Educational Assistance is granted as the evidence shows you currently have a totally disabling service-connected disability or disabilities, permanent in nature. (38 USC Chapter 35, 38 CFR 3.807, 38 CFR 21.3021)

TRANSCRIPT

As you can see, the example on the screen does not provide what evidence was used to make the decision nor does it provide the basis for the decision. This is the standard language generated by VBMS-R when establishing a P&T evaluation.

When it comes to establishing a P&T evaluation, this is the type of decision narrative we must get away from. This short form narrative will not work in rating decisions when P&T is being established. The rating decision narrative for P&T evaluations are required to contain the evidence used to make the decision and the basis of the decision.

A Gulf War Era Veteran who is service connected at seventy percent disabling for generalized anxiety disorder (GAD) files a claim for an increased evaluation. A review of their VA treatment records show an increase in the severity of symptoms. The VA exam conducted in connection with their claim shows the Veteran now warrants an evaluation of 100 percent disabling for their GAD. In the exam report, the examiner provides, “Although the Veteran has had continuous treatment for his GAD, no improvement has been shown over the course of the past ten years. There is no likelihood of improvement of this condition.”

Has the evidentiary standard to establish P&T been met?

☒ Yes
☐ No

That is correct. In this scenario, the evidentiary standard to establish a P&T evaluation has been met.
